

Water and Wastewater Basics Training for Public Officials

Decision makers are often faced with challenges relating to essential infrastructures, meeting customer demands and maintaining cost of services. By understanding the fundamental operation of their water and wastewater systems, decision makers are better prepared to deal with environmental issues and avoid compliance problems in the long run. This training is designed to provide a broad overview of water and wastewater treatment facilities and provide attendees with an opportunity to tour local facilities. Any public official who oversees and makes essential decisions relating to water and wastewater facilities is encouraged to attend.
